Definitions of Form Types

Annotations:

Annotations are forms with a clause or paragraph from a contract or similar document, with a discussion by the author of the pros and cons of using that given clause in a full contract. Annotations usually explain what the clause means.

Checklists:

Sample or template checklists with boxes for a specific purpose that a user may use.

Clauses:

Some forms include clauses that may be used as part of a contract or similar document, but do not constitute an entire contract.

Contracts:

Sample or template contract that may be modified by the user to fit a specific purpose.

Documents:

This category consists of corporate documents including official filings, charters, term sheets, schedules, credit applications, policy statements, diagrams, sales scripts, valuation analyses, and plans for securities distribution. Also included are templates for patent applications, living wills, health care proxies, and powers of attorney.

Letters:

Sample and template letters commonly used by attorneys in various phases of legal practice.

Model Court Orders:

These forms contain standard language and arguments that may be submitted to a court, along with spaces in which a user would fill in his/her own information.

Official Forms:

Forms from a government agency that have fields for the customer to fill in, such as their name, address, Social Security Number, etc.

Pleadings/Motions:

These contain standard language, arguments, and formatting necessary for a submission to the court, along with spaces in which a user would fill in his/her own information.

Required Notices:

This includes both forms that a user may be required to post (e.g. a "Fair Housing Poster"), as well as forms containing information that must be disclosed, by law, in a sale of securities, real estate, or any other highly regulated transaction.

Questionnaires:

Forms in a Q&A format, usually with boxes to indicate the user's response.

Wills/Trusts:

Sample or template will or trust with spaces in which a user would fill in his/her own information.
