§ 9:1 Introduction

There are two separate but sometimes related concepts in the Bankruptcy Code: discharge and dischargeability of debt.<sup>1</sup> Creditors contesting a debtor’s entitlement to a discharge or to the discharge of a particular debt must distinguish between the two concepts and acquaint themselves with the rules applicable to proceedings involving such contests.<sup>2</sup> Both objections to discharge and to the dischargeability of particular debts must be made by way of complaint in accordance with Rule 7001 of the Federal Rules of Bankruptcy Procedure. The Bankruptcy Rules impose strict deadlines for filing complaints. Moreover, the failure to file a complaint timely may result in extreme prejudice to creditors and malpractice claims by creditors against attorneys failing to represent their interests adequately.

1. See 11 U.S.C. §§ 523, 727.

Creditors considering the filing of an adversary complaint seeking either a determination of the dischargeability of a debt or the denial of the debtor's discharge should not ignore the problems inherent in trying to settle these actions.<sup>3</sup>

§ 9:2 Who Is Entitled to a Discharge?

The "fresh start" concept underlies the discharge. If a discharge is granted, the debtor's obligation to pay pre-petition debts is fully extinguished, except for those debts that specifically are not subject to discharge under the Bankruptcy Code or that the court determines are not dischargeable after the filing of a complaint and a hearing. The debts that are extinguished are said to be discharged. The Bankruptcy Code specifies which and to what extent debts can be discharged. It also specifies which debts are automatically non-dischargeable and the grounds upon which debts can be found to be non-dischargeable.

Denial of discharge is the severest civil punishment that can be dealt to a debtor. Ordinarily, if a discharge is granted in an individual's Chapter 7 case, the debtor loses all his nonexempt assets, but his future earnings and property acquired after the filing of the petition are protected from pre-petition creditors. If a discharge is denied, however, not only will the debtor's nonexempt assets be liquidated in the case, but the debtor's future earnings and any property acquired after the filing of the petition will be subject to reach by pre-petition creditors, to the extent permitted by state law.<sup>4</sup>

§ 9:2.1 Individuals

An individual is generally eligible for discharge under Chapter 7, 11, 12, or 13.<sup>5</sup>

  5. 11 U.S.C. §§ 727(a), 1141(d), 1228, and 1328.

[A] Requirements for Issuance of Discharge

Even a debtor who dies after filing a petition is entitled to discharge in Chapter 7, which releases his estate from dischargeable debts.<sup>6</sup> A Chapter 7 debtor automatically receives a discharge, which can be entered fairly early in the case, except in the following circumstances:

- (1) a complaint, or a motion under § 727(a)(8) or (a)(9), objecting to the discharge has been filed and not decided in the debtor's favor;
- (2) the debtor has filed a waiver under § 727(a)(10);
- (3) a motion to dismiss the case under § 707 is pending;
- (4) a motion to extend the time for filing a complaint objecting to the discharge is pending;
- (5) a motion to extend the time for filing a motion to dismiss the case under Rule 1017(e)(1) is pending;
- (6) the debtor has not paid in full the filing fee prescribed by 28 U.S.C. § 1930(a) and any other fee prescribed by the Judicial Conference of the United States under 28 U.S.C. § 1930(b) that is payable to the clerk upon the commencement of a case under the Code, unless the court has waived the fees under 28 U.S.C. § 1930(f);
- (7) the debtor has not filed with the court a statement of completion of a course concerning personal financial management as required by Rule 1007(b)(7);<sup>7</sup>
- (8) a motion to delay or postpone discharge under § 727(a)(12) is pending;
- (9) a motion to enlarge the time to file a reaffirmation agreement under Rule 4008(a) is pending;
- (10) a presumption has arisen under § 524(m) that a reaffirmation agreement is an undue hardship; or
- (11) a motion is pending to delay discharge, because the debtor has not filed with the court all tax documents required to be filed under § 521(f).<sup>8</sup>

6. FED. R. BANKR. P. 1016.

7. FED. R. BANKR. P. 5009(b) requires the clerk to notify a debtor who has not timely filed the statement that the case will be closed without entry of a discharge unless the lapse is remedied.

8. FED. R. BANKR. P. 4004(c)(1)(B)-(L).

The entry of the discharge can occur relatively early in a Chapter 7 case because, in Chapter 7 and Chapter 11 cases, the U.S. trustee is required to call a meeting of creditors “no fewer than 21 and no more than 40 days after the order for relief.”<sup>9</sup> Thus, in the absence of circumstances such as a request for an extension of time for filing a complaint under 11 U.S.C. § 727, the filing of a motion to dismiss under section 707, or litigation with respect to complaints filed under section 727, and assuring the debtor has completed a personal financial management course required for individual Chapter 7 debtors and Chapter 13 debtors,<sup>10</sup> the debtor can expect to receive a discharge within several months of filing the petition. Additional requirements may extend the time between the filing of the petition and the entry of the discharge. For example, pursuant to section 727(a)(12), the court may not enter a discharge if section 522(q)(1) may be applicable to the debtor or there is a pending proceeding in which the debtor may be found guilty of a felony as described in section 522(q)(1)(A) and (B).<sup>11</sup>

An individual debtor in a Chapter 11 case receives a discharge only after the completion of all payments under the plan,<sup>12</sup> unless certain conditions akin to a Chapter 13 hardship discharge are met.<sup>13</sup>

Caution: An uncodified provision of the Act forbids the issuance of a discharge to an individual who has not provided requested tax documents.<sup>14</sup>

A Chapter 13 debtor ordinarily obtains a discharge by successful completion of the Chapter 13 plan.<sup>15</sup> The Chapter 13 discharge is not much broader than that in Chapter 7,<sup>16</sup> and the Chapter 13

P. 1007(b)(7) and (c), and 4004(c)(1)(H). Incarceration does not warrant exemption from the requirement. See In re Denger, 417 B.R. 485 (Bankr. N.D. Ohio 2009); In re Cox, 2007 WL 4355254 (Bankr. debtor must complete a personal financial management course.<sup>17</sup> If a Chapter 13 debtor cannot successfully complete a Chapter 13 plan, he may be entitled to a “hardship discharge,” which is similar in scope to the discharge available to an individual in a Chapter 7 or Chapter 11 case. To obtain a hardship discharge, the debtor must establish that:

- (1) his failure to complete plan payments is “due to circumstances for which he should not justly be held accountable”;
- (2) the value of the property actually distributed under his plan is not less than what creditors with allowed unsecured claims would receive in a Chapter 7 liquidation; and
- (3) modification of the plan is not practicable.<sup>18</sup>

[B] Waiver of Discharge

An individual debtor has a right to waive discharge. The waiver must be in writing, executed by the debtor after the order for relief, and approved by the court.<sup>19</sup> In determining whether to approve the debtor’s proposed written waiver of discharge, the bankruptcy court must evaluate objecting creditors’ interests along with evidence indicating the likelihood that the debtor may not have fully comprehended the import of the waiver.<sup>20</sup>

§ 9:2.2 Corporations and Partnerships

Only individuals are entitled to a discharge under Chapter 7.<sup>21</sup> Other debtors, including corporations and partnerships, are not entitled to a discharge under Chapter 7.<sup>22</sup> A Chapter 11 debtor who is not an individual can obtain a discharge pursuant to a confirmed plan of reorganization, unless (1) the plan provides for the liquidation

In the bankruptcy court, the creditors argued that the debtor was attempting to escape the effect of having judgments entered against him and to force them to pursue him outside of bankruptcy, likely in his new home state of Florida. As to a debtor’s right to vacate his discharge, see In re Newton, 490 B.R. 126 (Bankr. D.D.C. 2013).

of all or substantially all of the property of the estate; and (2) the debtor does not engage in business after consummation of the plan.<sup>23</sup> A liquidation case is supposed to eliminate the existence of an operating business entity. To prevent “trafficking in corporate shells,” the Bankruptcy Code provides that if the debtor reemerges, it will still be liable on its debts.<sup>24</sup>

§ 9:2.3 Chapter 12 Debtors

Chapter 12 differs from both Chapters 11 and 13 with respect to entitlement to a discharge. It makes no distinction among individuals, corporations, and partnerships<sup>25</sup> or whether the Chapter 12 plan contemplates liquidation or continued operation.<sup>26</sup> Thus, a family farmer or fisherman in Chapter 12 will receive a discharge regardless of whether the debtor is an individual, corporation, or partnership, and regardless of the type of plan.

Except for certain types of debts, a Chapter 12 debtor ordinarily obtains a discharge by successful completion of the Chapter 12 plan.<sup>27</sup> For individuals, debts excepted from discharge in a Chapter 7 case are similarly excepted from discharge in Chapter 12.<sup>28</sup> A Chapter 12 debtor also may obtain a discharge prior to completion of the Chapter 12 plan under certain conditions.<sup>29</sup> That discharge is the same as the one given for successful completion of a plan.

§ 9:3 Effect of a Discharge

A discharge voids any judgment at any time obtained if the judgment is determined to be a personal liability of the debtor with respect to a debt discharged under sections 727, 1141, 1228, and 1328.<sup>30</sup> The discharge also operates as a permanent injunction, directed to the creditors of the debtor, against all forms of collection efforts on discharged debts against the debtor or his property.<sup>31</sup> An unsecured creditor's assertion that he held an in rem claim that survived discharge and was excepted from the permanent injunction of section 542(a)(2) has been rejected where the creditor did not have an attachment or other remedy prior to the discharge.<sup>32</sup>

Violation of this injunction can be treated as contempt.<sup>33</sup> If a bankruptcy court finds a creditor in civil contempt for violation of the discharge injunction, it may award compensatory damages.<sup>34</sup>

31. 11 U.S.C. § 524(a)(2) and (3). A mortgage lender's refusal to foreclose is not a violation of the discharge injunction. Canning v. Heilman (In re Heilman), 430 B.R. 213 (B.A.P. 9th Cir. 2010) (discussing hold-harmless provision in a marital dissolution decree and section 523(a)(3)). The Bankruptcy Code does not have an implied exception from discharge for attorney fees allowable under 11 U.S.C. § 329(a), see Bethea v. Robert J. Adams & Assocs., 352 F.3d 1125 (7th Cir. 2003), cert. denied, 541 U.S. 1043 (2004); nor does it have such an exception for post-petition, pre-conversion Chapter 11 administrative expenses, see Fickling v. Flower, Medalie & Markowitz (In re Fickling), 361 F.3d 172 (2d Cir. 2004). See also Rittenhouse v. Eisen, 404 F.3d 395 (6th Cir.), cert. denied, 546 U.S. 872 (2005); *Hessinger & Assocs. v.   32. See Parker v. Handy (In re Handy), 624 F.3d 19, 21–22 (1st Cir. 2010).
  33. The weight of authority is that section 524 does not imply a private right of action, either alone or through section 105(a). See Pertuso v. Ford Motor Credit Co., 233 F.3d 417, 421–23 (6th Cir. 2000); Walls v. Wells Fargo Bank, N.A., 276 F.3d 502, 507–10 (9th Cir. 2002) (following Pertuso's analysis); Cox v. Zale Del., Inc., 239 F.3d 910, 917 (7th Cir. 2001) (agreeing with the result in Pertuso and determining that the only relief available to remedy alleged section 524 violations is a contempt action in the bankruptcy court that issued the discharge). See also Besette v. Avco Fin. Servs., Inc., 230 F.3d 439, 444–45 (1st Cir. 2000) (refusing to address whether section implies a right of action, because, in the First Circuit's view, a bankruptcy court's contempt power under section 105(a) offers sufficient remedies). Cf. Joubert v. ABN AMRO Mortg. Grp., Inc. (In re Joubert), 411 F.3d 452 (3d Cir. 2005) (concluding that "the decisions holding that § 105(a) does not authorize separate lawsuits as a remedy for bankruptcy violations, though established in the § 524 context, are equally applicable when the underlying complaint is grounded in § 506(b)"). Contempt proceedings for violation of the discharge injunction must be initiated by a motion in the bankruptcy case, and not an adversary proceeding. Barrientos v. Wells Fargo Bank, 633 F.3d 1186 (9th Cir. 2011). A judgment creditor's inaction, following discharge of judgment debtor in bankruptcy, in not making any effort to evidence effect of debtor's discharge on its judgment, violated discharge injunction. Johnson v. Cadles of Grassy Meadows II, LLC (In re Johnson), 466 B.R. 67 (Bankr. E.D. Va. 2012).
  34. See Holley v. Kresch Oliver, PLLC (In re Holley), 473 B.R. 212, 216 (Bankr. E.D. Mich. 2012), aff'd, 2013 WL 791549 (E.D. Mich. Mar. 4, 2013) (punitive damages may only be awarded for criminal contempt).

Some courts have determined that they lack jurisdiction to hear adversary proceedings for violations of the Fair Debt Collection Practices Act and that the debtors' remedies are limited to seeking contempt orders in the bankruptcy court.<sup>35</sup> The debtor is free to pay voluntarily any debt discharged in bankruptcy, but creditors may not in any way coerce payments.<sup>36</sup> Additionally, the discharge of the debtor's debts does not affect the liability of any other entity on, or the property of any other debtor for, such debt.<sup>37</sup>

In Chapter 7 cases, liens pass through bankruptcy unaffected.<sup>38</sup> Secured creditors, while barred from seeking in personam relief against the debtor, retain their in rem rights against the debtor's property.<sup>39</sup>

If, however, a debtor is denied a discharge, or a creditor is successful in obtaining a determination that a particular debt is non-dischargeable, the debtor is liable for any debt that is not discharged. Thus, after the debtor's bankruptcy case is closed, or upon an earlier lifting of the automatic stay, holders of non-discharged debts may pursue the debtor and his property.<sup>40</sup>

Section 525 of the Bankruptcy Code prohibits discrimination against a person solely because of the filing of a bankruptcy petition.

§ 9:4 Reaffirmation, Redemption, and Surrender

An individual debtor whose liabilities include secured debts or personal property leases must file, pursuant to section 521 of the Code, a “statement of intention” within the earlier of the date of the section 341 meeting of creditors or thirty days from filing of the petition.<sup>43</sup> As to each affected item of property, the Chapter 7 debtor must select one of three options: surrender the property or, if the debtor wishes to retain the property, state whether he will reaffirm the debt secured by the property, or redeem the property by paying the amount of the allowed secured claim.<sup>44</sup> Prior to the effective date of BAPCPA, when this section only covered debts, not leases, some courts held that the debtor had a fourth option: continuing to make payments until the debt was paid in full while avoiding personal liability if he should fail to make payments. The fourth option has been eliminated as to personal property,<sup>45</sup> but may remain viable for real property.<sup>46</sup>

The stated intention must be performed within thirty days from the date first set for the section 341(a) meeting.<sup>47</sup>

To make absolutely certain that the debtor acts upon the statement of intention, the debtor may not retain possession of personal property which is the subject of an allowed purchase money security interest unless the debtor redeems the property “not later than 45 days after the first meeting of creditors under section 341(a).”<sup>48</sup> Further, if the debtor fails to do so, the automatic stay terminates with respect to the property, and it is no longer property of the estate unless the court orders otherwise.<sup>49</sup>

Without regard to the three alternatives, a debtor can always voluntarily repay a discharged debt.<sup>50</sup> The payment must be voluntary, and it does not create an enforceable obligation.<sup>51</sup>

§ 9:4.1 Reaffirmation

A debtor under any chapter of the Bankruptcy Code may enter into an agreement with a creditor to reaffirm his obligation to repay a debt that would otherwise be dischargeable.<sup>52</sup> In a recent decision, a court refused to permit a Chapter 7 debtor to reaffirm an automobile lease, holding that the debtor could assume the lease instead under section 365(p).<sup>53</sup> Reaffirmation agreements must be filed no later than sixty days after the first date set for the meeting of creditors and accompanied by a cover sheet, prepared as prescribed by the appropriate official form.<sup>54</sup> Reaffirmation agreements are more prevalent in individual Chapter 7 cases than in Chapter 11, 12, and 13 cases where the debtors provide for the treatment of claims in reorganization plans.<sup>55</sup> Even though unsecured debts need not be listed in the statement of intention, the statute authorizes reaffirmation of unsecured as well as secured debts. However, counsel should be aware that some bankruptcy judges are reluctant to permit the reaffirmation of unsecured obligations unless special circumstances are shown. To the extent an enforceable reaffirmation agreement is created, the debt reaffirmed is not discharged.

A debtor may have various reasons for reaffirming a debt. For example, an individual Chapter 7 debtor may want to retain property subject to a security interest, such as the family car, but may be unable to raise sufficient funds to redeem the secured creditor's interest under section 722.<sup>56</sup> In that event, the secured creditor may agree to permit the debtor to retain the collateral in exchange for the debtor's agreement to remain personally liable on the obligation. To the extent the value of the collateral is less than the secured creditor's claim, the secured creditor avoids having the unsecured portion of its claim treated as an unsecured claim. Another reason why debtors often agree to reaffirm a debt is to settle litigation involving a creditor's objection to the dischargeability of a particular debt. There is no requirement that a creditor enter into a reaffirmation agreement. It can simply refuse or condition the reaffirmation agreement on the reaffirmation of other debts.<sup>57</sup>

The Bankruptcy Code has strict requirements governing the enforceability of reaffirmation agreements, including the requirement that the reaffirmation agreement be entered into before the court grants the debtor a discharge<sup>58</sup> and that the agreement does not impose an undue hardship on the debtor.<sup>59</sup> Section 524 contains highly detailed provisions for disclosures which must be contained in a reaffirmation agreement. These provisions should be carefully reviewed particularly by counsel representing creditors who may be called upon to draft the reaffirmation agreement and accompanying disclosures.

The statute requires a "disclosure statement" that must set forth the amount of debt reaffirmed, the applicable annual percentage

A debtor who is in the process of negotiating a reaffirmation agreement may move to postpone the entry of a discharge order.<sup>69</sup> An amended statement of intention filed by a Chapter 7 debtor to surrender collateral securing debt that was the subject of a reaffirmation agreement will not serve to rescind the reaffirmation agreement, and thus a debtor cannot prevail in an action for contempt.<sup>70</sup> Similarly, a modification to a reaffirmation agreement may not constitute a rescission of an earlier timely filed reaffirmation agreement.<sup>71</sup> A reaffirmation agreement, however, may be rescinded “at any time prior to discharge or within sixty days after such agreement is filed with the court, whichever occurs later.”<sup>72</sup>

To rebut a presumption of undue hardship, the debtor must identify and explain the sources of the additional funds. “The income of another party may, in appropriate circumstances, constitute a satisfactory ‘additional source of funds’ but only if the court is satisfied that the other person is both motivated to provide the funds and financially capable of doing so.”

§ 9:4.2 Redemption

Redemption allows a debtor to redeem consumer goods from a lien by paying the creditor the amount of the allowed secured claim.<sup>73</sup> The amount must be paid in full at the time of redemption.<sup>74</sup> The specific statutory prerequisites are:

- (1) an individual debtor;
- (2) tangible consumer goods securing dischargeable consumer debt;
- (3) property that has either been claimed as exempt by the debtor<sup>75</sup> or has been abandoned by the trustee.<sup>76</sup>

While the statute appears to require approval of redemption by the court on motion,<sup>77</sup> there is authority for the proposition that consensual redemption agreements do not require bankruptcy court approval.<sup>78</sup>

There are practical problems with redemption. First, in the absence of agreement, the court must determine the value of the property to be redeemed. The Rash test applied by the Supreme Court to Chapter 13 cramdowns<sup>79</sup> does not apply to redemptions as there is no ongoing risk to the creditor who receives cash.<sup>80</sup> Where the debtor is an individual in Chapter 7 or 13, the value of personal property subject to an allowed secured claim is to be based on “replacement value of such property as of the date of the filing without deduction for costs of sale or marketing.”<sup>81</sup> For property acquired for personal, family, or household purposes, replacement value means “the price a retail merchant would charge for property of that kind considering the age and condition of the property at the time value is determined.”<sup>82</sup>

Bankruptcy courts have employed three valuation approaches to determine the value at which a debtor may redeem personal property:

- (1) the fair market value, which is the net amount a creditor would receive after repossessing and disposing of the collateral as permitted under non-bankruptcy law;
- (2) the liquidation value, which is the amount that the personal property would generate in an auction or forced sale; and
- (3) the commercially reasonable disposition approach.<sup>83</sup>

The last approach allows the court to examine a variety of factors, such as the age and condition of the property, in valuing the personal property.<sup>84</sup>

§ 9:4.3 Surrender<sup>85</sup>

If the debtor elects to surrender property, the property must be surrendered within thirty days after the date first set for the section 341(a) meeting.<sup>86</sup> It has been held the debtor does not have to pack up or deliver the collateral, merely make it available for pickup.<sup>87</sup> Other courts have granted the creditor relief from stay to enable it to recover the property by appropriate state law remedies.<sup>88</sup>

Bankruptcy courts have considered whether a creditor can be compelled to take affirmative steps to foreclose property surrendered through a debtor's Chapter 13 plan and have considered whether failure to do so violates the automatic stay.<sup>89</sup> The court in In re Moore

Similarly, nothing in subsection 521(a)(2) remotely suggests that the secured creditor is required to accept possession of the vehicle at the end of the 30-day period, as such a reading would be at odds with well-established law that a creditor's decision whether to foreclose on and/or repossess collateral is purely voluntary and discretionary."); In re Cornejo, 342 B.R. 834 (Bankr. held that a creditor could not be compelled, reasoning that nothing in section 521(a) required a secured creditor to accept possession<sup>90</sup> and that the debtor remained the equitable owner of the property and was not divested of his ownership obligations until an actual foreclosure sale occurred or until the lender took affirmative steps of ownership.<sup>91</sup>

§ 9:5 Discharge Orders

In a Chapter 7 case, if no complaints objecting to discharge are filed, the discharge order shall issue “forthwith” upon expiration of the time fixed for filing such complaints.<sup>92</sup> The time for entering discharge orders in Chapters 11, 12, and 13 cases is somewhat different from the time for such orders in Chapter 7. Similarly, the timing in Chapters 12 and 13 is different from that in Chapter 11. In broad terms, the confirmation of a Chapter 11 plan constitutes a discharge order<sup>93</sup> except for individual Chapter 11 debtors.<sup>94</sup> In the case of individual debtors, unless the court orders otherwise, after notice and a hearing, and for cause, confirmation of the plan does not discharge any debt provided for in the plan until the court grants a discharge on completion of all payments under the plan.<sup>95</sup> This provision is discussed in chapter 11 of this treatise.

In Chapter 12 and 13 cases, the court is to grant the debtor a discharge of all debts dischargeable under those chapters as soon as practicable after completion of all payments under the plan.<sup>97</sup> As more fully discussed below, Chapters 12 and 13 also provide for “hardship discharges” in the event that not all payments are completed under the plan.

To obtain a discharge, Chapter 7 and Chapter 13 debtors must complete a personal financial management course from an approved

§ 9:6 Objection to an Individual Debtor's Discharge

§ 9:6.1 Introduction

In Chapter 7 cases, only individual debtors are entitled to a discharge.<sup>100</sup> An individual Chapter 7 debtor is entitled to a discharge unless one of several specified conditions is present.<sup>101</sup> Generally, courts have recognized, on the one hand, that exceptions to discharge should be strictly construed against creditors and in favor of debtors, and, on the other hand, that a discharge is a privilege and not a right.<sup>102</sup>

An individual in a Chapter 7 case who has committed certain improper acts is not entitled to a discharge. Any creditor, the trustee, or the U.S. trustee may file a formal complaint alleging facts that constitute grounds for denial of discharge under section 727.<sup>103</sup> Moreover, on request of a party in interest, the court may order the trustee to examine the acts and conduct of the debtor to determine whether a ground exists for denial of discharge.<sup>104</sup>

§ 9:6.2 Procedure and Time for Objections

A complaint to determine the debtor's entitlement to a discharge must comply with the procedures set forth in the Federal Rules of Bankruptcy Procedure.<sup>105</sup> The plaintiff must file a complaint, and the debtor will be required to file an appropriate response, and the litigation may proceed through discovery and trial. Objections to discharge based upon a prior discharge having been granted are made by motion governed by Rule 9014.<sup>106</sup>

In a Chapter 7 case, creditors and the trustee have sixty days following the first date set for the meeting of creditors to file complaints objecting to discharge.<sup>107</sup> The Bankruptcy Appellate Panel for the Ninth Circuit recently determined that the one-year “lookback” period is a statute of repose not subject to equitable tolling.<sup>107.1</sup> Therefore, a complaint must be filed before the expiration of the deadline or the allowance of an extension of that deadline by the bankruptcy court. A creditor may obtain an extension of time within which to file a complaint, if he files a request for an extension before the expiration of the sixty-day period.<sup>108</sup> An informal agreement to extend the deadline is ineffective.<sup>108.1</sup> Thus, the extension must be

The computation of time is from the first scheduled date of the section 341(a) meeting. If the meeting is postponed for whatever reason, the time period is not automatically extended. Where the court erroneously sends multiple notices of the deadline date, with different dates, a creditor can rely on the later date. In re Crawford, 347 B.R. 42 (Bankr. S.D. Tex. 2006). authorized by the court.<sup>108.2</sup> There are limited exceptions to the filing of a motion to extend the time after its expiration and before discharge.<sup>109</sup> The Supreme Court has held that this time limit is not jurisdictional and may be waived.<sup>110</sup>

In a Chapter 11 case, parties in interest have until the first date set for a hearing on confirmation to file a complaint objecting to discharge.<sup>111</sup> On motion of any party in interest, the court may for cause extend the time for filing such a complaint. The motion, however, must be made before the appropriate time period has expired.<sup>112</sup>

Rule 4004(b)(2) provides that a motion to extend the time to object to discharge may be filed after the time for objection has expired and before discharge is granted if the movant can satisfy two conditions: (1) the objection is based on facts that, if learned after the discharge, would provide a basis for revocation of the discharge under 11 U.S.C. § 727(d); and (2) the movant did not have knowledge of those facts in time to permit an objection.<sup>113</sup> The motion must be filed promptly after the movant learns of the facts on which the objection is to be based.<sup>114</sup>

If the deadline passes without a party in interest obtaining an extension or filing a complaint, the creditor or trustee is barred from objecting to discharge. On the other hand, a debtor forfeits any right to rely on the time limit if debtor does not raise the issue before the bankruptcy court reaches the merits of the creditor's objection.<sup>115</sup> Creditors and trustees should note that a complaint objecting to discharge (or a complaint objecting to the discharge of a particular debt) cannot be amended to add new transactions after the date for filing objections has passed.<sup>116</sup>

§ 9:6.3 Grounds for Denial of Discharge

The following subsections comprise the improper acts that warrant denial of an individual's discharge.

[A] Fraudulent Transfer, Concealment, or Destruction of Property<sup>117</sup>

The debtor will lose his right to a discharge if, with intent to hinder, delay, or defraud creditors, he has transferred, destroyed, mutilated, or concealed property or permitted the transfer, destruction, mutilation, or concealment of property, within one year prior to the filing of the petition.<sup>118</sup> The debtor also will be denied a discharge if he commits any of the above acts in connection with property of the estate after the commencement of the bankruptcy case.<sup>119</sup>

Courts frequently apply the doctrine of continuing concealment in circumstances where "a debtor, prior to the year before the bankruptcy, has transferred property but has secretly held something back, and has concealed that secret interest in the months immediately preceding Maxfield (In re Jennings)*, 533 F.3d 1333, 1349 (11th Cir. 2008) (setting forth badges of fraud). In Martin v. Bajgar (In re Bajgar), 104 F.3d 495, 498 (1st Cir. 1997), the U.S. Court of Appeals for the First Circuit determined that a debtor, who admitted making a transfer of real property within one year of the filing of his bankruptcy petition with actual intent to hinder, delay, and defraud his creditors, but who arranged for the re-transfer of the property post-petition, was not entitled to a discharge under section 727(a)(2)(A). Additionally, in In re Snyder, 152 F.3d 596, 601 (7th Cir. 1998), the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Seventh Circuit stated that "proof of harm is not a required element of a cause of action under Section 727." See also Laughlin v. Nouveau Body & Tan, L.L.C. (In re Laughlin), 602 F.3d 417 (5th Cir. 2010) (a pre-petition renunciation of an inheritance is not a transfer under Louisiana law).

bankruptcy.”<sup>120</sup> Such conduct preceding the “critical” year prior to the bankruptcy can provide circumstantial evidence of concealment activity and fraudulent intent within that year, thus enabling a creditor to establish that the debtor is not entitled to a discharge under section 727(a)(2)(A).

[B] Failure to Keep or Destruction of Records<sup>121</sup>

The debtor will be denied a discharge for failure to keep or preserve records from which the debtor’s financial condition and business transactions can be ascertained.<sup>122</sup> Similarly, the debtor will lose a discharge for falsifying, concealing, or destroying these records. However, a debtor who can justify the failure to keep or preserve records will be entitled to a discharge. The inquiry into the debtor’s financial condition, according to the Second Circuit, is limited to “the span from a reasonable period of time before the bankruptcy filing through the pendency of the bankruptcy proceedings.”<sup>122.1</sup>

[C] False Oath or Claim<sup>123</sup>

The debtor may lose a discharge if, in connection with the bankruptcy case, the debtor makes a false oath or account or presents or uses a false claim.<sup>124</sup> The First Circuit has said:

[T]he very purpose of certain sections of the law, like 11 U.S.C. § 727(a)(4)(A), is to make certain that those who seek the shelter of the bankruptcy code do not play fast and loose with their assets or with the reality of their affairs. The statutes are designed to insure that complete, truthful, and reliable information is put forward at the outset of the proceedings, so that decisions can be made by the parties in interest based on fact rather than fiction. . . . Neither the trustee nor the creditors should be required to engage in a laborious tug-of-war to drag the simple truth into the glare of daylight.<sup>125</sup>

The debtor signs an oath in connection with his or her petition, statement of financial affairs, and schedule of assets and liabilities. False statements or omissions in these documents, in the debtor's testimony at the meeting of creditors, or at an examination pursuant to Bankruptcy Rule 2004 are the most common sources for complaints filed under this section. To constitute grounds for denial of discharge, the falsehood must be made knowingly and fraudulently and must be material.<sup>126</sup>

A debtor who knowingly and fraudulently gives, offers, or receives a bribe in connection with the case will be denied a discharge.

The debtor is required to provide the trustee or other officer of the estate with all recorded information, such as documents and records, relating to the debtor's property or financial affairs.<sup>129</sup> A debtor who knowingly and fraudulently withholds such information will be denied a discharge.

[F] Failure to Explain Loss of Assets<sup>130</sup>

If the debtor had assets at one time that have now disappeared without apparent explanation, the trustee or the creditors may demand an explanation of what happened to those assets. If the debtor cannot supply a satisfactory explanation, the court may deny the debtor's

Many of the disappearing asset cases involve gamblers, or persons who claim that the missing assets were lost by gambling. Without substantiation, the unlucky debtor has difficulty in rebutting the plaintiff's case.<sup>132</sup>

[G] Failure to Follow Valid Orders<sup>133</sup>

A debtor may not refuse to obey any lawful order of the court in the bankruptcy case. A debtor may be required by court order to produce documents, submit to an examination under Rule 2004, testify, or respond to material questions in other contexts. If the debtor disobeys any such court order, such disobedience is grounds for denial of discharge.<sup>134</sup> The refusal must be willful and intentional.<sup>135</sup>

A debtor will not be denied a discharge for refusal to testify or respond to material questions if the debtor has invoked the right against self-incrimination under the Fifth Amendment, unless, of course, immunity has been granted.<sup>136</sup>

[I] Personal Financial Management Training

Before the court will enter a discharge, a Chapter 7 debtor must complete an instructional course concerning personal financial management given by a provider approved by the U.S. trustee. A debtor must file the certificate of completion within forty-five days after the first date set for the section 341 meeting of creditors, not within forty-five days of when the first meeting of creditors actually takes place.<sup>140</sup> If the debtor fails to complete the course and file a certificate of debtor education, the court will not enter a discharge.<sup>141</sup> There is an exception to the requirement for those individuals whom the court finds, after notice and a hearing, are unable to complete the course because of "incapacity, disability, or active military duty in a military combat zone."<sup>142</sup> There is an additional exception under section 727(a)(11) if the U.S. trustee has determined that the approved instructional courses described in section 111<sup>143</sup> are inadequate.<sup>144</sup>

[J] Prior Discharge; Other Grounds

Besides wrongdoing by the debtor, and the failure to file the certificate regarding completion of a financial management course, the Code sets out other circumstances in which a debtor is not eligible to receive a discharge. One such circumstance is a prior discharge previously granted in a Chapter 7 or Chapter 11 case commenced within eight years before the date of the filing of the current petition.<sup>145</sup> Similarly, a debtor granted a discharge in Chapter 12 or 13, in a case commenced within six years before the filing of the current petition, is ineligible for discharge unless the debtor paid at least 70% of the claims of unsecured creditors under the plan.<sup>146</sup> Moreover, that plan must have been proposed in good faith and must have constituted the debtor's best effort.<sup>147</sup> A debtor may execute a written waiver of discharge after the order for relief. If the court approves this waiver, the debtor will be denied a discharge.<sup>148</sup> The plain language of section 727(a)(10) contains four requirements, namely that a waiver must be:

- (1) in writing,
- (2) signed by the debtor,
- (3) filed post-petition, and
- (4) approved by the court.<sup>148.1</sup>

There is a split of authority as to whether the court should consider the interests of creditors and other parties in interest in approving a waiver, or the debtor's motive.<sup>148.2</sup>

In Chapter 7 and Chapter 13 cases, the court may not enter a discharge if after notice and a hearing it determines that there is reasonable cause to believe that the provisions of section 522(q) apply.<sup>149</sup> The same applies in Chapters 11 and 12.<sup>150</sup>

Under a narrow set of circumstances, a discharge already granted in Chapter 7, 11, 12, or 13 may be revoked.<sup>155</sup> Similar to the procedure for objecting to a discharge, a proceeding to revoke a discharge is an adversary proceeding that is commenced by the filing of a complaint by the trustee, a creditor, or the U.S. trustee.<sup>156</sup>

Unlike errors in setting bar dates for filing proofs of claim or filing dischargeability actions, both of which are deadlines set not by statute but by the Federal Rules of Bankruptcy Procedure, the discharge deadline is statutory insofar as § 727(e)(1) establishes an outside limit on actions to revoke discharges. While courts have used their equitable power to prevent harm to parties who have complied with incorrect non-statutory deadlines, *Nicholson v. ## § 9:8 Dischargeability of Debts

§ 9:8.1 Introduction

As previously discussed, a debtor’s entitlement to a discharge does not necessarily discharge a debtor from all debts. For purposes of understanding the substance, procedure, and timing for a determination of dischargeability of a particular debt, non-dischargeable debts can be divided into two categories: (1) section 523(c) debts,<sup>169</sup> for which there is a “short deadline” to commence an action to determine dischargeability;<sup>170</sup> and (2) other section 523 debts, for which non-dischargeability is often self-operating. For the latter type of debts, generally, there is no requirement for a court determination of non-dischargeability unless a critical element of the basis for non-dischargeability is in dispute (for example, whether a debt is actually a domestic support obligation). If such a determination is requested, there is no deadline for filing a complaint to determine dischargeability.<sup>171</sup>

Section 523(a) lists non-dischargeable debts, all of which are potentially non-dischargeable in an individual’s Chapter 7 case.<sup>172</sup>

168. 11 U.S.C. §§ 1228(d), 1328(e).

169. 11 U.S.C. § 523(c) provides that the debtor shall be discharged from debts specified in subsections 523(a)(2), (4), and (6) unless the court determines the debt to be excepted from discharge after notice and a hearing.

170. FED. R. BANKR. P. 4007(c) and (d). Where the creditor was not given notice of the filing, this deadline may be equitably extended. See In re Phelan, 420 B.R. 791 (Bankr. N.D. Ill. 2009).

171. Although complaints to determine dischargeability of debts other than those under section 523(c) may be filed by either the debtor or creditors, they are ordinarily filed by the debtor, as discussed below.

172. 11 U.S.C. § 523(a).

In a Chapter 11 case, unless the debtor is an individual, and subject to section 1141(d)(3), all debts that arise prior to confirmation of the plan are discharged except to the extent the plan provides for payment.<sup>173</sup> An individual in a Chapter 11, however, is subject to the same non-dischargeability rules as a Chapter 7 debtor.<sup>174</sup>

There are certain types of claims that remain dischargeable in Chapter 13 that are not dischargeable in Chapter 7.<sup>175</sup> Additionally, a Chapter 13 debtor may propose to cure defaults in an installment debt and to maintain payments during the life of the plan. If the last payment is due after the final payment under the plan, the successful completion of the plan does not discharge the balance of the debt still owing at the time of the completion of the plan.<sup>176</sup>

There is also a “hardship discharge” in Chapter 13. If a debtor is unable to complete the plan successfully, the debtor may nonetheless petition for a discharge if the failure to complete is due to circumstances for which “the debtor should not be justly held accountable,”<sup>177</sup> the distribution to creditors is at least as great as they would have received in Chapter 7,<sup>178</sup> and modification of the plan is not practicable.<sup>179</sup> Typical examples of circumstances that may warrant the entry of a hardship discharge are health problems or changes in employment status. If each of the unsecured creditors has been paid at least as much as he would have received in a Chapter 7 liquidation and modification of the plan is impracticable, a hardship discharge will be granted.<sup>180</sup> A hardship discharge, of course, does not discharge the installment debts that are due beyond the term of the plan, as these are ordinarily non-dischargeable in a successful Chapter 13 case. Moreover, a hardship discharge does not discharge any of the section 523(a) debts that are non-dischargeable in Chapter 7.<sup>181</sup>

The Chapter 12 discharge is akin to the discharge granted to an individual in a Chapter 11 case.<sup>182</sup> In Chapter 12, as soon as practicable after the debtor completes all payments under a confirmed plan, the court is to grant the debtor a discharge of all allowed debts provided for under the plan and all debts that have been disallowed under section 502. The discharge is to be granted notwithstanding the fact that all payments of long-term debts and to claimants who are to receive property of the estate have not been completed. These debts are excepted from discharge in Chapter 12.<sup>183</sup>

182. See chapter 12, infra.

The debtor may receive a hardship discharge in Chapter 12 even if payments are not completed under the confirmed plan.<sup>184</sup> The requirements for a hardship discharge in Chapter 12 are virtually the same as for Chapter 13.<sup>185</sup> Under Chapter 12, the debts that are dischargeable under a hardship discharge are identical to the debts discharged after completion of payments.<sup>186</sup> As a consequence, there is no distinction between the discharge granted for completion of payments or for a hardship in a Chapter 12.

§ 9:8.2 Procedure and Time for Objections

A determination of dischargeability, if one is necessary, is made by filing a complaint.<sup>187</sup> As with a complaint objecting to discharge, the filing commences an adversary proceeding governed by part VII of the Federal Rules of Bankruptcy Procedure.<sup>188</sup>

The necessity of filing a complaint and the deadline for doing so depend on which category of non-dischargeable debt is involved. For section 523(c) debts for individuals in Chapters 7, 11, and 12, as well as for Chapter 13 debtors, a complaint must be filed within sixty days following the first date set for the meeting of creditors.<sup>189</sup> Courts are

As to the remaining section 523 debts, non-dischargeability is often self-operating and, accordingly, there is no need to obtain a court determination of non-dischargeability. Occasionally, it may become desirable for someone to file a complaint to obtain a determination that a particular debt will be (or has been) discharged, in whole or in part.<sup>196</sup> A complaint to determine dischargeability of one of these debts may be filed at any time.<sup>197</sup> Indeed, a closed case may be reopened for purposes of filing a complaint to determine dischargeability.<sup>198</sup>

§ 9:8.3 Burden of Proof

Except for the presumption of fraud specified in connection with a consumer's pre-bankruptcy "loading-up" of debts,<sup>199</sup> the Bankruptcy Code and Rules are silent as to the burden of proof. In Grogan v. Garner,<sup>200</sup> the U.S. Supreme Court ruled that preponderance of the evidence was the standard of proof in the context of a complaint under section 523(a)(2)(A).<sup>200.1</sup> The standard has been applied to all exceptions from discharge under section 523(a), thereby overruling the numerous decisions pursuant to which courts, in keeping with the set by Bankruptcy Rule 4007 on grounds of "excusable neglect," in a case where it has previously extended the deadline on a motion filed prior to the expiration of the deadline, it could thereafter grant an untimely motion for a further extension). The decision in Soler has been criticized. See Stuart v. Mendenhall (In re Mendenhall), 572 F. App'x 858 (11th Cir. 2014). United Cmty. Bank v. Harper (In re Harper), 489 B.R. 251 (Bankr. N.D. Ga. 2013) (deadline may not be extended on motion filed after the deadline has already expired).

195. See Tidwell v. Smith (In re Smith), 582 F.3d 767, 778 n.4 (7th Cir. 2009).

196. Rule 4007(a) permits either any creditor or the debtor to file complaints to determine dischargeability. In cases involving determinations for debts not covered by section 523(c), the debtor is more likely to be the person to file, although this varies depending on the type of debt and the grounds for non-dischargeability.

If the debt is a consumer debt, a creditor bears some risk in filing a complaint objecting to dischargeability under section 523(a)(2).<sup>201</sup> Congress sought to prevent the abuse by creditors of the threat of suit to obtain reaffirmation agreements or consents to the entry of judgments determining consumer debts to be non-dischargeable. If a creditor pursues a complaint against the debtor with respect to a consumer debt and the court ultimately finds that the debt is dischargeable, a creditor may have to pay the debtor’s costs and attorney fees incurred in defending the complaint, unless the creditor’s position was substantially justified or “if special circumstances would make the award unjust.”<sup>202</sup>

Creditors frequently rely upon state court judgments to establish exceptions to discharge. Collateral estoppel bars relitigation of issues determined in prior court actions. Also known as issue preclusion, it applies to discharge exception proceedings under section 523(a).<sup>202.1</sup> In utilizing collateral estoppel, federal courts must grant the same preclusive effect to the judgment as a court in the rendering state.<sup>202.2</sup>

§ 9:8.4 Non-Dischargeable Debts Under Section 523(c)

The types of debts discussed in this section are called “523(c) debts” because they are listed in that subsection, which refers to subsections 523(a)(2), (a)(4), and (a)(6). They are dischargeable in cases under all chapters unless, on the complaint of an affected creditor in an adversary proceeding, the court determines the debt to be excepted from discharge.<sup>203</sup> Attorneys should be aware of the short deadline for filing complaints to determine the non-dischargeability of these debts.<sup>204</sup> If fraud is involved, Rule 9 of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure applies through Bankruptcy Rule 7009, requiring that the circumstances of fraud be pleaded with particularity. ### [A] Debts Created by Fraud

[A][1] False Pretenses, False Representations, and Actual Fraud

If a debt is created when the debtor obtains money, property, services, or credit by false pretenses, false representations, or actual fraud, the debt is not dischargeable under section 523(a)(2)(A). The First Circuit has adopted a six-part test for establishing that a debt is non-dischargeable because of false pretenses, a false representation or actual fraud:

[A] creditor must show that (1) the debtor made a knowingly false representation or one made in reckless disregard of the truth, (2) the debtor intended to deceive, (3) the debtor intended to induce the creditor to rely upon the false statement, (4) the creditor actually relied upon the misrepresentation, (5) the creditor's reliance was justifiable, and (6) the reliance upon the false statement caused damage.<sup>206</sup>

In In re Catt, 368 F.3d 789, 791 (7th Cir. 2004), the court determined a default judgment was entitled to collateral estoppel effect. It stated a "significant minority" of courts had so ruled "provided that the defaulted party could have appeared and defended if he had wanted to." Id. (citing, inter alia, In re Cantrell, 329 F.3d 1119 (9th Cir. 2003)).
206. McCrorry v. Spiegel (In re Spiegel), 260 F.3d 27, 32 (1st Cir. 2001); 11 U.S.C. § 523(a)(2)(A). In McClellan v. Cantrell, 217 F.3d 890 (7th Cir. 2000), the court determined that section 523(a)(2)(A) is not limited to the tort of fraudulent misrepresentation. It held that section 523(a)(2)(A) extends to actual fraud where reliance is not relevant. The bankruptcy appellate panel for the Sixth Circuit adopted the McClellan formulation in Mellon Bank, N.A. v. Vitanovich (In re Vitanovich), 259 B.R. 873, 876 (B.A.P. 6th Cir. 2001). The First Circuit refused to decide whether it would adopt the McClellan test, stating "McClellan is consistent with our existing precedent in that it also requires a direct link between the alleged fraud and the creation of the debt." Spiegel, 260 F.3d at 32 n.7. See also Sharfarz v. Goguen (In re Goguen), 691 F.3d 62 (1st Cir. 2012) (discussing causation in fact and legal causation). Fraud against the original lender may be enforced by an assignee. First Am. Title Ins. Co. v. Pazdzierz (In re Pazdzierz), 459 B.R. 254, 261 (E.D. Mich. 2011), aff'd in part, 718 F.3d 582 (6th Cir. 2013). Silence may not constitute false pretenses or representations. Andrews v. Chamblee (In re Chamblee), 510 B.R. 370 (Bankr. N.D. Ala. 2014).

False statements of financial condition, however, are expressly excluded from subsection (a)(2)(A) and are governed by section 523(a)(2)(B), which requires a writing.<sup>207</sup> Courts have imposed a requirement of actual intent to deceive in cases of false pretenses or false representations.

In Field v. Mans,<sup>208</sup> the U.S. Supreme Court indicated that under section 523(a)(2)(A), in contrast to section 523(a)(2)(B), a creditor need only show justifiable reliance on the false representations of the debtor.<sup>209</sup> Moreover, in Cohen v. De La Cruz,<sup>210</sup> the Court considered the issue of whether section 523(a)(2)(A) encompassed treble damages awarded by a state court or just the value of the “money, property, services, or . . . credit obtained.” The Court determined that treble damages were within the exception, thereby resolving a conflict among the circuits.

A difficult application of section 523(a)(2) is in the area of credit cards. After the initial credit card agreement, there is no face-to-face dealing between the card issuer and the cardholder, which has led to considerable confusion and the application of a wide variety of tests by various courts. This is one area where knowledge of local precedent is vital. What appears to be an increasingly popular approach by the courts (we doubt if there is a weight of authority) is this: Each transaction is a unilateral contract where the cardholder promises to repay the debt plus to periodically make partial payments along with accrued interest, where the card issuer performs by reimbursing the merchant who has accepted the credit card in payment or advancing the cash.<sup>211</sup>

In Archer v. Warner,<sup>212</sup> the Supreme Court held that “[a] debt embodied in the settlement of a fraud case ‘arises’ no less ‘out of’ the underlying fraud than a debt embodied in a stipulation and consent decree.” It added that although a settlement agreement and releases may be a kind of novation, that does not bar a showing that the settlement debt arose out of “‘false pretenses, a false representation, or actual fraud.’”<sup>213</sup>

Fraud of one partner can be imputed to another. Where a debtor was at least recklessly indifferent to the conduct of his business partner in using the partnership business to perpetrate fraud on investors in connection with the sale of unregistered securities, the debtor was vicariously liable for his partner's fraud under state law, and the debts to the investors were non-dischargeable.<sup>214</sup>

[A][2] False Statements of Financial Condition

Certain debts that result from using false statements of financial condition in order to obtain money, property, or services are not dischargeable. These statements must be in writing and must contain a materially false representation of the debtor's financial condition or the financial condition of an insider of the debtor, made with an intent to deceive.<sup>215</sup> The creditor must have reasonably relied on the statement in extending the credit or supplying the property or services.<sup>215.1</sup>

There is a major division in the cases as to whether "a statement respecting the debtor's or an insider's financial condition" should be read broadly or narrowly. The narrow view—that such a statement must deal with the debtor's net worth or overall financial condition—has been adopted by the Fifth and Tenth Circuits and the Bankruptcy Appellate Panel for the Ninth Circuit,<sup>216</sup> and rejected by the Fourth Circuit.<sup>217</sup> The bankruptcy courts are widely split.<sup>218</sup>

Fraudulent credit applications or financial statements provided to a lender are the major causes for filing complaints under this section. Attempts to avoid the writing requirement by framing the complaint under section 523(a)(6) generally fail.<sup>219</sup>

[A][3] “Loading Up” Consumer Debts and Credit Card Debts

Certain consumer debts (incurred for personal, family, or household purposes) owed to a single creditor carry a presumption of actual fraud under certain circumstances.<sup>220</sup>

If the debtor owes a single creditor a debt of more than $650 for “luxury goods or services” and that debt was incurred within ninety days of the bankruptcy filing, the debt is presumed to be non-dischargeable.<sup>221</sup> “Luxury goods and services” are defined only by excluding goods and services reasonably necessary for the support or maintenance of the debtor and the debtor’s dependents.<sup>222</sup>

The presumption also extends to cash advances of more than $925 obtained under an open end credit plan within seventy days prior to filing.<sup>223</sup>

[B] Fiduciary’s Fraud or Fiduciary’s Defalcation and Embezzlement or Larceny

A debt incurred as a result of fraud or defalcation while acting in a fiduciary capacity, or by embezzlement or larceny, is not dischargeable.<sup>224</sup> In objecting to the discharge of a claim arising out of a fiduciary’s fraud or defalcation, an attorney must be particularly aware of the bankruptcy definition of these terms. Thus, courts have determined that the meaning of “fiduciary” in section 523(a)(4) is an issue of federal law.<sup>225</sup> The fiduciary relationship, for example, has been limited to cases of an express or technical trust created by law, as opposed to a constructive trust implied as a result of wrongdoing.<sup>226</sup>

[C]ertain rules are clear about the availability of the exception:

- 1) The burden of proof to establish defalcation is on the creditor, given the “fresh start” policy. In re Menna, 16 F.3d [7 (1st Cir. 1994)] at 9 (a claimant must prove that his “claim comes squarely within an exception enumerated in Bankruptcy Code § 523(a)”; see also Palmacci v. Umpierrez, 121 F.3d 781, 786 (1st Cir. 1997).
- 2) The creditor must show defalcation by a preponderance of the evidence. Grogan [v. Garner], 498 U.S. at 286–87, 111 S. Ct. 654.
- 3) The exception to discharge applies to fiduciaries only while they are acting in a fiduciary capacity.
- 4) Inherent in “defalcation” is the requirement that there be a breach of fiduciary duty; if there is no breach, there is no defalcation.
- 5) In order to avoid redundancy, defalcation must mean something other than fraud and different from “willful and malicious injury,” 11 U.S.C. § 523(a)(6).
- 6) Defalcation is to be measured objectively. Cent. Hanover Bank & Trust Co. v. Herbst, 93 F.2d 510, 512 (2d Cir. 1937).

That then leaves the question of the standard to measure when a fiduciary breach is a “defalcation.” . . . The etymology of the word thus shows the term historically has covered both fraudulent and non-fraudulent acts. Our view is that not every breach of a fiduciary duty amounts to defalcation.

In Tenn. Educ. Lottery Corp. v. Cooper (In re Cooper), 430 B.R. 480, 497–98 (Bankr. E.D. Once the fiduciary relationship has been established the creditor must establish fraud or defalcation. The term “fraud” continues to be construed as actual fraud, as opposed to constructive fraud or fraud implied by law, even though section 523(a)(4) merely refers to “fraud.”<sup>231</sup> A creditor, therefore, must prove intentional wrongdoing or moral turpitude. However, the term “defalcation” continues to encompass a broader range of acts. The Supreme Court has attempted to resolve years of confusion in the cases by defining “defalcation”:

[W]here the conduct at issue does not involve bad faith, moral turpitude, or other immoral conduct, the term requires an intentional wrong. We include as intentional not only conduct that the fiduciary knows is improper but also reckless conduct of the kind that the criminal law often treats as the equivalent. Thus, we include reckless conduct of the kind set forth in the Model Penal Code. Where actual knowledge of wrongdoing is lacking, we consider conduct as equivalent if the fiduciary “consciously disregards” (or is willfully blind to) “a substantial and unjustifiable risk” that his conduct will turn out to violate a fiduciary duty. . . . That risk “must be of such a nature and degree that, considering the nature and purpose of the actor’s conduct and the circumstances known to him, its disregard involves a gross deviation from the standard of conduct that a law-abiding person would observe in the actor’s situation.”<sup>232</sup>

Creditors often rely upon state or federal statutes to argue the existence of a fiduciary relationship with mixed results. Sometimes the statutes are clear and establish a technical trust.<sup>233</sup> At other times, the statute may simply create a trust ex malificio<sup>234</sup> or fail to create a trust relationship.<sup>235</sup>

Debts created by embezzlement and larceny are non-dischargeable, whether or not they arise in a fiduciary relationship. Both terms include an element of fraud or intentional wrongdoing. Embezzlement involves the wrongful appropriation of funds or property lawfully in possession of the debtor.<sup>236</sup> Larceny involves the fraudulent and wrongful taking of property with the intent to convert.<sup>237</sup>

*Kawaauhau v. In Geiger, the Court concluded section 523(a)(6) applies to “acts done with the actual intent to cause injury,” but excludes intentional acts that cause injury.<sup>242</sup>

Courts have formulated the standard for willful injury as the commission of “an intentional act the purpose of which is to cause injury or which is substantially certain to cause injury.”<sup>242.1</sup> Circuit courts are divided about whether the term “substantial certainty” is a subjective standard, requiring a creditor to prove that a debtor actually knew that the act was substantially certain to injure the creditor, or an objective standard, requiring a creditor to show that a debtor’s act was substantially certain to cause injury.<sup>242.2</sup> The Fifth Circuit has adopted a condensed approach, such that “[t]he test for willful and

Although Geiger defined “willful,” it did not illuminate the second modifier of injury, “malicious.” Malice requires “a showing that the debtor’s willful, injurious conduct was undertaken without just cause or excuse.”<sup>243</sup>

The Eighth Circuit has held that publishers relinquished their right to have a jury determine the amount of damages in an action for willful copyright infringement when they filed claims against the debtor’s bankruptcy estate.<sup>244</sup> The court rejected the publishers’ attempts to distinguish *Katchen v. debtor, who was a defendant in creditor's personal injury action, conspired with another defendant to fraudulently transfer unencumbered property to a third party. Although the creditor did not obtain his personal injury judgment until after the transfer occurred, he did obtain a judgment on his subsequent fraudulent transfer claim, the debtor was aware of personal injury claim at time of transfer, and there was no showing that the debtor had just cause to effect the transfer.<sup>251</sup>

Application of the willful and malicious standard pertinent to section 523(a)(6) poses difficulties when a plaintiff seeks to use collateral estoppel.<sup>251.1</sup> In addition, application is particularly difficult when the injuries are financial, and the court whose judgment the plaintiff seeks to enforce has not made specific findings as to the debtor's intent to injure.<sup>251.2</sup>

§ 9:8.5 Non-Dischargeable Debts Other Than Under Section 523(c)

With some minor exceptions, the remaining section 523 debts are debts for which the Code provides special treatment for public policy reasons. Generally, the issue is one of proper classification, and not proof of affirmative or intentional wrongdoing. The non-dischargeability of these debts may be self-operating, and a complaint is filed only if a party requests a determination by the court. Hence, the deadline for filing complaints applicable to the section 523(c) debts does not apply, and a determination of dischargeability may be made at any time.<sup>252</sup>

[A] Gap Claims

Section 523(a)(1)(A) excepts from discharge taxes and customs duties specified in section 507(a)(3), which section grants priority to unsecured claims allowed under section 502(f). The last cited section deals with so-called gap claims, claims arising in the ordinary course by a debtor in the period between the filing of an involuntary petition and the entry of the order for relief.<sup>253</sup>

[B] Eighth Priority and Other Taxes

Section 523(a)(1)(A) also excepts from discharge taxes specified in section 507(a)(8). That convoluted provision covers seven different types of taxes. Additionally, applicable periods are suspended, and, hence, extended, by periods during which the taxing authority is prohibited from collection activities.<sup>254</sup> The non-dischargeability of the underlying taxes extends to penalties related to the tax claim.<sup>255</sup>

[B][1] Three-Year Taxes

Income and gross receipt taxes for pre-petition periods for which the return was due (including any extensions) within three years before the filing of the petition are non-dischargeable.<sup>256</sup> The time that the return was due controls. The time can be tolled. The unnumbered last paragraph, found after section 523(a)(19), commonly described as “§ 523(a)(*),” has led to a substantial conflict in the cases as to whether a late-filed return is a “return” for purposes of section 523(a)’s requirement that it conform to “applicable nonbankruptcy law (including applicable filing requirements).”<sup>257</sup>

Because the debtor did not elect otherwise, she once again became the owner of her property at confirmation, except as to those sums specifically dedicated to fulfillment of the plan. Thus, the Franchise Tax Board was not prevented from collecting the post-petition tax debt from property that reverted in Jones upon plan confirmation. See 11 U.S.C. § 362(a)(1). Since the tax debt arose after plan confirmation, the tax board could have collected on the debt during the three-year lookback period, and as a result the limitations period was not statutorily suspended.

[B][2] 240-Day Taxes

Income and gross receipt taxes assessed within 240 days before the petition date are non-dischargeable.<sup>258</sup> In this case, it is the date of assessment, rather than the date the return is due, that controls. The time can be tolled by the periods when an offer in compromise is pending (plus thirty days)<sup>259</sup> or the time during which a stay is in effect (plus ninety days).<sup>260</sup>

[B][3] Unassessed but Assessable Taxes

When a tax is not assessed pre-petition, but, by law or agreement, it may be assessed post-petition, it is not dischargeable.<sup>261</sup> This provision does not apply to unfiled or late filed returns or to fraudulent returns, both of which are excepted from discharge by other provisions of the Code discussed below.<sup>262</sup>

[C] Unlisted or Unscheduled Debts

Sometimes, either intentionally or inadvertently, the debtor will fail to list a creditor or to schedule a debt. As a result, the creditor may be unaware of the bankruptcy and miss the deadline for filing a proof of claim.<sup>271</sup> The debt owed to a creditor who had neither notice nor knowledge of the bankruptcy in time to file a proof of claim or to file a complaint for determination of dischargeability of the debt under section 523 will not be discharged.<sup>272</sup>

In broad terms, debts provided for by a Chapter 12 or 13 plan or that are disallowed under section 502 are discharged.<sup>273</sup> Similarly, all debts in a Chapter 11 case that arise before the date of confirmation are discharged, except as provided by the plan<sup>274</sup> and by section 1141(d)(3). Suppose, however, that there is a pre-petition debt, not provided for by the plan and the debtor has failed to give notice of the bankruptcy to the creditor. It would appear that under Bankruptcy Rule 3002(a), a claim could be deemed disallowed for failure to file a proof of claim, even if the creditor had no notice of the bankruptcy. As courts have pointed out, this language would discharge a debt even if the failure to file a proof of claim (leading to omission from the plan) was due to the creditor's lack of notice resulting from the debtor's failure to list the creditor and schedule the debt. Courts have consistently recognized the constitutional problems in discharging a debt if the creditor had no notice of the need to file a proof of claim. Hence, courts have held these provisions to be unconstitutional to the extent they result in the discharge of the debt of a creditor who is without notice or knowledge of the bankruptcy and the need to file a proof of claim.<sup>275</sup>

By using the unqualified phrase “in any manner” to modify a debtor’s “willful attempts” to evade or defeat his taxes, the plain language of the statute suggests that “willful attempts” under § 523(a)(1)(C) include attempts to evade or defeat the payment or collection of a tax. . . . The plain language of the statute offers no reason to conclude that “willful attempts” only refer to attempts to evade the assessment of tax, but not the collection or payment thereof.

Special problems arise with respect to the discharge of debts in no-asset cases. Courts have held that in Chapter 7 no-asset cases, section 523(a)(3)(A) does not apply because no bar date is set for filing claims. Creditors are not deprived of anything by the inability to file a timely claim because claims need not be filed.<sup>276</sup>

Under section 523(a)(3)(B), a debt that is not dischargeable under section 523(a)(2), (4), and (6) will not be discharged if the omitted creditor was deprived of the opportunity to file a claim and the opportunity to timely file a complaint to determine dischargeability of the debt, unless the creditor had notice or actual knowledge of the case in time to timely file a complaint.<sup>277</sup> A separate motion to reopen is not necessary when a creditor commences an action under section 523(a)(3)(B).<sup>277.1</sup>

Colo. 2010). There is a split of authority as to whether the omission of a reference to section 523(a)(15) in this section was a technical error that should be corrected by inserting that reference. See Anderson v. Richards (In re Anderson), 2009 WL 4840871, at *8 (Bankr. D. Mass. Dec. 10, 2009), and cases cited.

Courts are split as to whether debtors should be permitted to reopen Chapter 7 no-asset cases in order to afford relief to debtors.<sup>278</sup> Some courts hold that reopening the case would afford no relief to the debtor as reopening of the case would be meaningless.<sup>279</sup> Other courts view the reopening more favorably, finding that reopening and amendment of the schedules ensures proper notice to creditors if dividends become possible.<sup>280</sup>

[D] Domestic Support Obligations and Other Divorce-Related Claims

Prior to BAPCPA, there was massive litigation concerning the issue of whether a particular obligation arising out of a marital dissolution was alimony or support, and hence non-dischargeable under former section 523(a)(5), or a property settlement, which might or might not be dischargeable under former section 523(a)(15). The situation has been substantially simplified by the revised statute. A new concept, the “domestic support obligation” (called a “DSO” in bankruptcy jargon), was introduced to replace the language of former section 523(a)(5).

If the obligation does not fall within the scope of a DSO, it will still be non-dischargeable if it is owed to a spouse, former spouse, or child of the debtor and arose out of the marital dissolution.<sup>281</sup> The intent of the parties is crucial for determination of dischargeability under section 523(a)(5).<sup>282</sup> In determining dischargeability, all evidence, direct or circumstantial, is relevant to the parties’ subjective intent.<sup>283</sup> The following factors are informative of the decision:

When the debt is not payable directly to the spouse or child, the courts have struggled with the applicability of section 523(a)(5). For example, debts payable to the former spouse's attorneys have been held non-dischargeable under this provision.<sup>285</sup> Fees payable to a guardian ad litem for children of divorcing parents have been held to

A debtor must normally file a complaint to determine dischargeability to bring the issue before the court.<sup>302</sup> However, the Supreme Court has sustained a discharge contained in a Chapter 13 plan where the creditor had adequate notice that discharge of the debt was sought.<sup>303</sup>

The Bankruptcy Code lacks a definition of “undue hardship.” Courts require more than temporary financial adversity, but they do not require “utter hopelessness.”<sup>304</sup>

The so-called Brunner test has been widely adopted.<sup>305</sup> Under Brunner the debtor must establish:

- (1) that the debtor cannot maintain, based on current income and expenses, a “minimal” standard of living for herself and her dependents if forced to repay the loans;<sup>306</sup>
- (2) that additional circumstances exist indicating that this state of affairs is likely to persist for a significant portion of the repayment period of the student loans; and

Another line of cases looks to the “totality of the circumstances” to make the determination.<sup>308</sup> The Eighth Circuit has stated that

In evaluating the totality-of-the-circumstances, our bankruptcy reviewing courts should consider: (1) the debtor’s past, present, and reasonably reliable future financial resources; (2) a calculation of the debtor’s and her dependent’s reasonable necessary living expenses; and (3) any other relevant facts and circumstances surrounding each particular bankruptcy case.<sup>309</sup>

Several courts of appeals have held that section 105 permits a bankruptcy court “to take action short of total discharge,”<sup>310</sup> although other courts adopt an “all or nothing” approach.<sup>311</sup>

Income-contingent repayment plans may be available on some student loans that may be a viable alternative to debtors.<sup>312</sup> Counsel should examine any offer made to a debtor under these plans as some are “back end loaded” and might be difficult for the debtor down the road.<sup>313</sup> It is not a requirement that debtors always must agree to an

[W]hether a recent law school graduate who is reasonably likely to be able to make significant debt repayments in the foreseeable future, and who qualifies for the Department of Education’s twenty-five year Income Contingent Repayment Plan, is entitled to an undue hardship discharge because, as the bankruptcy court put it, it is unlikely that his “shockingly immense” student loan debts [$350,000] will be totally repaid and therefore, “without the relief of discharge now, the debtor would, in effect, be sentenced to 25 years in a debtors’ prison without walls.”

Id. at 778. The Eighth Circuit, in reversing the district and bankruptcy courts, stated:

On this record, we conclude that, with the aid of an income contingent repayment plan, [the debtor] can presently make student loan payments without compromising a minimal standard of living, and he has the potential of repaying at least a substantial portion of his student loan debts during the ICRP repayment period. When a debtor is eligible for the ICRP, the court in determining undue hardship should be less concerned that future income may decline. The ICRP formula adjusts for such declines, without regard to the unpaid student loan balance, which in most cases will avoid undue hardship.

The issue of religious tithing often arises in student loan proceedings.<sup>314</sup>

Some courts hold that the issue of the discharge of student loan debts may not be ripe for adjudication early in a Chapter 13 case.<sup>315</sup>

So-called HEAL may only be discharged:

- (1) if the discharge is granted after the expiration of the seven-year period beginning on the first date when repayment of the loan is required, exclusive of any period of suspension of payments;
- (2) the exception to discharge would be unconscionable; and

While a judgment would be the best evidence to establish of non-dischargeability under this provision, a criminal conviction is not essential.<sup>318</sup> It would seem to be the better practice for a creditor having such a claim to file a complaint to determine the non-dischargeability of the debt based on, for example, drunk driving, and this is so for at least three reasons:

- (1) The debt is not of the same nature as alimony and support or a student loan, which on their face evidence their non-dischargeability;
- (2) The debtor is unlikely to have scheduled the claim with a notation that it arose as a result of drunk driving; and
- (3) The bankruptcy court must be presented with some verification of the entry of the decree or judgment of a court of record, showing that liability was incurred by the debtor as a result of driving while intoxicated.

§ 9:9 Settlement of Section 523 and Section 727 Adversary Proceedings

It is not uncommon for an aggressive creditor to bring an adversary proceeding seeking both avoiding discharge of its particular claim and denial of the debtor’s discharge in general. be much more difficult, because of the inclusion of the section 727 count.<sup>330</sup>

§ 9:9.1 Settlement of Section 523 Proceedings

Settlement of a section 523 proceeding, by which the debtor agrees that the claim will not be discharged, or agrees to pay a sum to the creditor, does not involve any public policy issues, and the fact that the creditor may be receiving more than it would as a distribution were its claim discharged in the case is not a major consideration.<sup>331</sup>

§ 9:9.2 Settlement of Section 727 Proceedings

When a creditor seeks to have a debtor's discharge denied for one of the grounds stated in section 727, a minority of cases hold that the resulting adversary proceeding cannot be settled as a matter of law.<sup>332</sup> Courts taking this position hold that allowing these actions to be settled is tantamount to allowing the dishonest debtor to "buy" a discharge.<sup>333</sup> This view appears to fly in the face of the bankruptcy rule that permits dismissal of section 727 actions upon notice.<sup>334</sup>

The majority view starts with the proposition that section 727 actions can be settled so long as the terms are fair and equitable and in the best interests of the estate.<sup>335</sup> The majority courts hold that a settlement is not in the best interests of the estate when it results in the creditor receiving benefits for itself, rather than a benefit for the estate.<sup>336</sup> Some courts condition acceptance of benefits by the creditor

§ 9:10 Money Judgments

There is a split of authority as to whether the bankruptcy court may issue a money judgment if it determines a debt to be non-dischargeable.<sup>338</sup> The Fifth Circuit in Morrison v. Western Builders has acknowledged the split of authority. It stated:

[T]he question presented is whether a bankruptcy court, in addition to declaring a debt non-dischargeable, has jurisdiction to liquidate the debt and enter a monetary judgement against the debtor. Several of our sister circuits that have considered this question found that the bankruptcy courts have the power to enter judgment in exactly this manner. See Cowen v. Kennedy (In re Kennedy), 108 F.3d 1015, 1017–18 (9th Cir. 1997); Longo v. McLaren (In re McLaren), 3 F.3d 958, 965–66 (6th Cir. 1993); Abramowitz v. Palmer, 999 F.2d 1274, 1278–79 (8th Cir. 1993); N.I.S. Corp. v. Hallahan (In re Hallahan), 936 F.2d 1496, 1508 (7th Cir. 1991); cf. Porges v. Gruntal & Co. (In re Porges), 44 F.3d 159, 163–65 & n.7 (2d Cir. 1995). Their reasoning, while pragmatic, stands in tension with the predominant theory of bankruptcy court jurisdiction. Nevertheless, while acknowledging the tension, we too conclude that jurisdiction existed to issue, if not necessarily later to enforce, the personal judgment against [the debtor].<sup>339</sup>

The Eighth Circuit has adopted the holding of Morrison. See Islamov v. Ungar (In re Ungar), 633 F.3d 675, 679 (8th Cir. 2011). See also Deitz v. Ford (In re Deitz), 469 B.R. 11, 21 (B.A.P. 9th Cir. 2012) aff'd, 760 F.3d 1038 (9th Cir. 2014) (citing Cowen v. Kennedy (In re Kennedy), 108 F.3d 1015 (9th Cir. 1997), and holding that the court could enter money judgment); In re Conley, 482 B.R. 191 (Bankr. S.D. Ohio 2012) (same).

Section 1961 of title 28 provides that “[i]nterest shall be allowed on any money judgment in a civil case recovered in a district court” and is to be calculated “from the date of the entry of the judgment” at a rate fixed in the statute.<sup>340</sup> Post-judgment interest is mandatory; the prevailing party is entitled to post-judgment interest even if the court makes no provision for its payment.<sup>341</sup> When a federal court adjudicates a state law claim, pre-judgment interest is generally a matter of state law.<sup>342</sup>
